Weekly Bulletin #294
May 31, 2008
See you in Chicago this weekend

THE WEEKLY BULLETIN is sent free of charge to anyone who asks for it. It is a publication of the ReCreation Foundation, the non-profit organization undertaking the work of sharing the message of Conversations with God (the purpose of life is the recreation of humanity) with the world.

Notes from Neale...

My dear friends...

I am in Chicago this weekend for a major spiritual renewal event at a hotel there (see Calendar item, below, for your way to more information), and I have been thinking about what I will say to the folks who come out to share some time with me.

I have three subjects that are crowding my head right now...so maybe I’ll touch on all three of them. Right now I’m looking at:

(1) The Illusions of Life
(2) The Meaning of Oneness in Every Day Life
(3) The Spiritual Revolution of the New Millennium

Much of this has to do with the radical altering of humanity’s Cultural Story – a story that we ran through in some detail last week in the Weekly Bulletin. You may want to check that out if you missed it. It was in the Best of the Blogs section.

As for the Illusions of Life, I wrote extensively about how it feels to come in touch with that this past Monday in the Reader’s Forum on my personal website. In case you missed that, I’d like to publish it again here...

The Path of Peace -- and Beyond
Notes from the Journey to Nowhere

There is nothing going on here. We are invited to not get caught up in the idea that there is something going on. There is nothing going on here. Everything that seems to be going on, we are making up. We are literally making it all up in our mind.

Things are happening, yes. That is undeniable. Things are happening. But none of it means anything. The source of all pain is our idea that some of it means something. None of it means anything. When we understand that, we understand everything -- and nothing.
Everything and nothing are the same thing.

Today is Monday. The start of another week. Another run at it. Another cycle of Whatever. We are going around in circles here. We're going nowhere. We're doing nothing. We've got ourselves thinking that we're getting somewhere and doing something, but we're going nowhere and doing nothing. When you see that, then you're getting somewhere.

Do you see the irony?

It can be fun to play, though. It can be wonderful fun to play. It can feel good. It can be in some ways exciting. But it means nothing. It is not real. Any more than watching a movie is real. We're watching a movie here. We're watching ourselves in it. Are we enjoying it?

The idea is to wake up. And to wake everyone else up. We're sleep-walking, and the idea is to wake up. Even if you're enjoying the dream, the idea is to wake up, because on the other side of the dream is the experience you are looking for. And the irony is, you can have it only by not looking for it.

None of this makes sense, I know. None of what I have written here makes sense, I know. Not to the human mind. The human mind is incapable of making sense out of any of it. Only the superhuman mind can begin to understand, begin to comprehend. So you must move into your superhuman mind.

It's not even fair, it's not even accurate, to call it "mind." I should really say, your superhuman Self. The invitation here is to move into your superhuman Self. Everything else is stuff you are making up.

There is a point to all of this, but only the superhuman Self can make it clear what that is. And It has no need to, because that which It would explain, It Is.

The Isness explains nothing. It simply Is. Explanations are not necessary. Only the human mind needs explanations, and begs for them. The superhuman Self is the explanation. It begs for nothing. It doesn't even know what 'begging' means.

I am going to be in Chicago this weekend. I've made up a story that by going there, to a major consciousness-raising event, I can impact the lives of a few hundred more people. I'm making that all up. It gives me something to do. None of it matters. It's all fiction. It's all a movie.

Here's the current story...

I know that pain and suffering can seem very real. I know that pleasure and joyfulness can seem very real as well. I know that. But we're making it all up.

Why?
Yes, why.

When I give it a reason, I'm making that up, too.

What are you making up today?

Love and hugs
and best wishes on your journey...

APPLYING THE MESSAGES OF CwG

Everything you ever wanted to know about being psychic but were afraid to ask...

Dear Neale: After reading the closing of your book and down to the ending of the last letter of your name there were chills that came all over me, and then even more chills. So I give you thanks for being the messenger you were meant to be. Above all, I give thanks for this book to be written. For I, too, had many of the same questions you did; I have even more regarding the psychic world.

My questions are: (1) How do you become psychic? (2) Is there a danger, as they say, for "bad" spirits to enter you if you do not put the white light around you? (3) In Mary Summer Rain's book Spirit Song she meditates and is in a place they call "hell". If there is no “hell” what place has she experienced? (4) What purpose is the white light? (5) Is it okay to ask a psychic for information about yourself and loved ones who have passed away? Or should we develop this ability ourselves? Love and happiness, Stephenie, Corona, CA.

Dear Stephenie: Your questions invite an entire book! Actually, question 1 is covered in the CWG trilogy. Let me give you some quick reference data here. First, there is no way to "become" psychic. You already are. Everyone is “psychic”, and there is no way not to be. Being psychic is part of our nature. It is our sixth sense. And recognizing this is the first step toward actively utilizing one's psychic ability.

So here is the short version of the answer to your question 1: Recognize, acknowledge, accept and own your own psychic sense as a natural gift. Use your psychic sense every day by paying attention to it; listen to your “intuition” about things, and act on that as often as you can. Don't think when you get a “psychic hit”, just act. Do it. The more you act quickly on your psychic “hits”, the more you'll learn to trust them, as you find that acting on them brings affirmative results.

Listen to feelings. Feelings are the language of the soul. If it "feels" like you should be doing, or not doing, something, listen to that. That's your psyche (soul) talking to you. Give yourself permission to be "wrong". It'll take a while to separate genuine intuitive wisdom from the mish-mash of thoughts, ideas, fears, etc., running around inside your head. Don't give up if you start following your feelings, or giving in to your first impulse, and finding yourself “wrong” for having done that.
Grant yourself some leeway here. Especially at first. Say the first thing that comes to your head. Whenever you get a “hit”, say it. Out loud. Put yourself “out there” in that way. You'll find that you're blurtling out to others some of the most astonishing stuff, and some of those others will look at you in shock that you could have come up with that such insight and information.

Never use psychic gifts for personal aggrandizement or enrichment. That's very much akin to using sex for personal power or manipulation, instead of the pure and loving purpose for which it was intended. I have found that psychic gifts “go away” if they are used to attract a shower of attention or money. Use psychic gifts only in the service, and for the benefit, of others. I realize this is my personal construction, but after all, it is me you are asking!

(2) I do not believe in the often talked about “danger” of “bad spirits” entering me—and so, of course, they don't! Ha! I have to laugh at that, because I really don't know which came first, the chicken or the egg! I mean, I genuinely don't know which happened initially, the belief or the experience.

I do think—and the CWG trilogy has led me to further believe—that our thought about a thing creates our reality of that thing, so if you carry a thought that (a) there is such things as “bad spirits,” and (b) putting the “white light” around you protects you from them, then that will be our experience. As a result, you won't be bothered by “bad spirits” any more than I am!

(3) I haven't read Mary Summer Rain's book Spirit Song. Those who know Mary Summer Rain say she is a very honest person, extremely true to herself, and so I am sure that she had the precise experience she has written about. My own CWG 3 talks much, more about this experience of “hell” which many people believe in, and which some (such as Mary) have apparently had, if only through brief, revealing “visitations”.

What place has Mary experienced? Good question. You would have to ask her. In my own view of things (which is worth nothing, actually, since this was Mary's experience), I would speculate that she has visited a place created deep in her personal belief system—which is to say, her personal reality, for in my construction, belief systems are reality. This place may be so deep in most people that they may have forgotten when they originally created it, or even that they did. In fact, they would swear to you that they didn't, that it is real. That it is Reality. And indeed, for them it is. “Hell” is simply not a reality for me, so I don't go there, nor am I afraid of going there, nor, therefore, will I ever go there, for there is no “there” to which to go! You see? (More about all of this will be found in the final book of the CwG series, HOME WITH GOD in a Life That Never Ends.) Of course, I could be all wrong in this, so I would be careful about adopting my belief system if I were you.

(4) What do you wish to be the “purpose of the white light”? Do you not see that things do not have a “purpose” intrinsically? That is the hardest part of what has been revealed to me for most people to understand. A thing has no purpose in and of itself. Every purpose for any thing is given to it by you and me. We decide what a thing means, and what purpose a thing shall have. And before we decide, a thing has no purpose at all!
Now it is true that some things have already been "assigned" a purpose by those who have come before us, and by the collective agreement of their offspring. We all understand the purpose of a fork, for instance. Or of a shovel. So we agree on some things, collectively, and thus make life workable. But there are some things we can't agree on, no matter how many people have “come before” with an idea about it.

What is the purpose of sex, for example? Or of power? What is the purpose of illness? Of God? What is the “purpose” of music? Of art? (They are still debating that one in PTAs and School Board budget meetings all across America. Some say music and art have no purpose, and therefore no place, in public schools. Others vehemently disagree.)

So you see, the white light has no purpose. It is purposeless, as is all of life. What is the purpose of your life? You decide! And while you're about it, decide what the purpose of the white light is.

(5) Of course it is okay to ask a psychic for information about yourself or a loved one who has passed away! Why wouldn't it be? At least, that's my opinion. Now someone else may tell you differently. Don't you see? There is nothing but point of view to dictate this. And whatever point of view you adopt, so, too, will it be for you. Now, do you think God has a “rule” about this? Wrrooonngg. God has no rules about anything! That's the whole message of the CWG books!

We must change beliefs of the young

What are we telling our young people, what are we teaching our children, about life and how it is? Do we understand that children learn more from our actions than from our words? If we want a newer world for our children, we have to do what it takes to stop them from re-creating our old one. And that begins with us stopping the modeling that we are doing.

NOTE: The following is an excerpt from The New Revelations. In the section preceding this one, God was telling humanity that if we are not careful, our own youth will undo us, because of the beliefs we have passed on to them. The dialogue picks up there...

So we must change the beliefs of the young.
Yes. Yet that cannot happen unless you change the beliefs of those who are teaching the young. And that means all of you. For you are teaching your young not merely in schools, but in every moment of their lives, as they observe you, their role models, living your lives.

This is something you must understand: your whole life is a teaching. Everything that you think, say and do instructs another.

Do you imagine that others do not know what you are thinking? Is it your idea that they are not listening to what you are saying? Are you hoping that they are not watching what you are doing?

Young people, especially, are eager to learn about life, and they learn the most about life from life itself. And they intuitively know this. That is why they observe so closely. Young people miss nothing. You think you are kidding them? Think again.

They see the fear. They see the anger. They see the hypocrisy. They see the saying of one thing and the doing of another. And yes, they even know pretty much of what you are thinking. More than you think they know.

So we must change our beliefs before we can expect the beliefs of our offspring to change.

Yes. And if you do not, you will stand by and watch your young do unimaginably terrible things—and wonder where they could have ever gotten such ideas.

Like the young people who took a gay college student named Mathew Shepherd to a lonely stretch of country road outside of Laramie, Wyoming a few years ago, tied him to a cow fence, brutally beat him and left him there to die.

Like those young men, yes.

They felt he deserved what they did to him.

Yes.

They didn’t even feel that what they were doing was inappropriate.

No one does anything inappropriate, given their model of the world.

Now there is an enormously important statement. It is. So let’s repeat it.

I said...

No one does anything inappropriate, given their model of the world.

So what we have to do is change our model of the world.

Exactly. That is what I have been saying here.
And we have to change people’s beliefs, because that is what their model of the world is based on.

Exactly.

Our offspring are simply mimicking us. All people are just imitating each other. We are all just doing what we see each other doing.

Do you know what one mirror said to the other mirror?

No.
